From the Desk of California State Treasurer Fiona Ma

Dear Friends,

DECEMBER 2021

I am amazed by the speed at which this year is transpiring before our eyes. In step with the passing of the Thanksgiving holiday, I am also particularly grateful for all that the State Treasurer's Office has recently accomplished. As the United Nations' Climate Change Conference known as COP26 concluded in Glasgow last month, an authority housed in my office has been helping California meet our ambitious climate priorities through innovative financing programs. Please turn to page 4 to read about how the California Alternative Energy and Advanced Transportation Financing Authority \(CAEATFA\) is incentivizing the private sector to invest in clean industries and a green built environment.

Speaking of gratitude, I'd like to take a moment to show our appreciation for the services veterans have provided to our great state and country. Just before the Veterans Day holiday last month, I was honored to receive an award from the American Legion and One Vet One Voice at their inaugural Veterans Community Awards Gala in San Francisco. Earlier this summer, we celebrated the 100 year anniversary of the California Department of Veterans Affairs' (CalVet) Home Loan Program by selling $108.6 million of Home Purchase Revenue Bonds to refund previously issued debt to better match CalVet's debt service obligations to anticipated revenues.

As we wrap up 2021, I want to ask all Californians to reach out and support one another during the holiday season. If you need assistance from my office, please do not hesitate to contact AskFiona@treasurer.ca.gov. Wishing you and your family a safe and joyous holiday season. Happy Holidays!

In Peace and Friendship,

Fiona Ma, CPA
California State Treasurer

Dear Fiona,

I would like to make a contribution to my granddaughter's ScholarShare 529 college savings account this holiday season. Are there any tax advantages I can benefit from by making a gift contribution?

Dana

Dear Dana,

'Tis the season of giving and a ScholarShare 529 contribution is a wonderful gift idea! By gifting a 529 contribution, you are giving the gift of education and a brighter future. Children's toys are often lost or discarded, but a gift contribution to a child's education will last a lifetime. The great thing about 529 gifts is that anyone can make a gift contribution to anyone's plan.

There are several tax advantages that come with making a gift contribution to a 529 plan. There is no federal gift tax on contributions up to $15,000 per year for single filers and $30,000 for married filers. There's even an option to gift amounts up to $75,000 for single filers and up to $150,000 for married filers if pro-rated over 5 years. This means you could make a one-time gift equivalent to the 5-year amount and it could all qualify for the federal gift tax exclusion. You may also be eligible for estate tax benefits.

Making a gift contribution is easy. There are options to make gift contributions online or by mail. You can make your gift even more memorable by downloading one of our gift of education certificates and presenting it to your loved one. Read more about ScholarShare 529's gifting options and get a head start on your holiday shopping.

For families that don't have a 529 college savings account yet, but would like to open one, ScholarShare 529 has a great promotion this holiday season. If you open a new ScholarShare 529 College Savings Plan account between December 8, 2021 and December 12, 2021, you may be eligible to receive a $50 Target GiftCard. For more information about this promotion, please see page 12.

Please note, federal tax law is complex and there are state and local taxes to consider, as well as your personal life situation and other circumstances. I recommend that you consult with a tax advisor to get a full understanding of what benefits you may be eligible for.

Sincerely,

Fiona

Dear Fiona,

My accountant suggested that I look into applying for the College Access Tax Credit Fund. I had never heard of this tax credit before my accountant mentioned it to me. She told me that your office administers the fund. What is it and how do I apply?

Sincerely,
April

Dear April,

Individuals, businesses, and insurance companies can make cash contributions to the College Access Tax Credit Fund (CATCF) in exchange for a tax credit equal to 50% of their contributions. The credit can be used to offset or reduce state income taxes. A portion of these contributions goes to the California Student Aid Commission, which administers the state's Cal Grant program. Cal Grants provide aid to in-need California undergraduates, vocational training students and those in teacher certification programs. These grants help California students achieve their higher education goals.

To claim the tax credit for the 2021 taxable year, you must apply on the California Educational Facilities Authority's (CEFA) website by January 3, 2022. An Authority that I chair, CEFA, is the administrator of the CATCF.

For assistance with the application, process, or payment of contributions, please contact CEFA at CEFA@treasurer.ca.gov or (916) 654-5711.

For tax related questions, I recommend that you consult with a tax professional.

Sincerely,

Fiona

How the Power of Financing is Helping California Fight Climate Change

By leveraging private capital for clean energy projects across the state, CAEATFA demonstrates that green banks can spur real change for people and the planet

Most people don't think of "climate action" and "financing authority" as going hand in hand, but right here in the State Treasurer's Office, the California Alternative Energy and Advanced Transportation Financing Authority (CAEATFA) is helping California meet its ambitious climate goals by successfully incentivizing the private sector to invest in a green built environment and clean industries. Along the way, CAEATFA is proving that green banks — a leading topic at the COP26 global climate summit last month — can have lasting positive impacts on communities and the environment.

In its first five years, CAEATFA's GoGreen Home Energy Financing program has unlocked $28 million in private capital in the form of home energy efficiency loans using $4 million of revolving funds, helping 1,600 California households save energy and money. The financed total has risen 60% over the past year, showing substantial growth and appetite for the program and mirroring a significant increase in overall green bank activity in the U.S.

In the commercial and industrial sector, CAEATFA's Sales and Use Tax Exclusion \(STE\) program for California-based manufacturers has incentivized recycling and manufacturing related to clean energy and advanced transportation across the state. In recent months, a sampling of STE recipients have: signed a $1 billion contract to provide sustainable aviation fuel for a major airline (Aemetis, Inc.); made significant progress toward a fast-charging, noncombustible battery that could extend the range of electric vehicles by 80 percent with advanced solid-state technology (QuantumScape Corporation); helped fight plastic pollution by making food-grade packaging from recycled plastic (rPlanet Earth); and installed next-generation equipment that will double recycling capacity and divert more materials from San Diego County landfills (EDCO Disposal Corporation).

CAEATFA Executive Director Derek Chernow at the Los Angeles facility of plastics recycler and STE recipient rPlanet Earth. Behind him are huge rolls of food-grade recycled plastic ready to be re-formed into sustainable packaging.

Additionally, in mid-November CAEATFA Executive Director Derek Chernow announced a list of Emerging Strategic Industries (ESIs) to support California's Lithium Valley in time for the 2022 STE application cycle. The ESI designation gives additional weight to applicants whose projects support a manufacturing market for lithium, a key component of batteries used for zero-emission vehicles and clean energy storage, extracted from the Salton Sea area.

"Past successes and future potential illustrate CAEATFA's power to effect transformational change through financing," says State Treasurer Fiona Ma. "I am so pleased to support California's climate and economic goals and look forward to doing even more for Californians in the future."

Calling for A National Green Bank

Treasurer Ma and CAEATFA have been leading voices in the call for the national Clean Energy and Sustainability Accelerator — a national green bank — to fuel the U.S. transition to a clean energy economy. Like CAEATFA, green banks use small pools of funds (public, private or a mix) to attract much larger pools of private investment in low-carbon technologies, making them an efficient way to transform markets.

Just before the COP26 summit in Glasgow, President Biden announced that his Build Back Better Plan will designate $29 billion for the Clean Energy and Sustainability Accelerator. Adoption of a national green bank puts the United States in the same company as the United Kingdom, Australia, Germany, Japan, and a growing number of other nations. A handful of states and local governments here in the U.S., many of them fellow members with CAEATFA in the American Green Bank Consortium, also have green banks.

Chernow, CAEATFA's executive director, notes that the Accelerator will help state-level green banks by directing a flow of federal funds that can be leveraged to effect even more positive change. For example, Accelerator funds could allow CAEATFA's GoGreen Financing programs to bolster the state's decarbonization efforts by financing heat pump technology for the 8.8 million Californians who get their electricity from publicly owned utilities. The programs could also expand to include financing for solar and battery storage at the direction of the Public Utilities Commission.

"The Clean Energy and Sustainability Accelerator will empower organizations like ours to help transform the economy, state by state," Chernow says. "CAEATFA is uniquely positioned to deliver a big impact with a relatively small amount of capital in support of California's climate goals."

Equitable Progress

It's no longer enough to make progress against climate change using the old benchmarks of emissions averted and dollars spent. The benefits must also be enjoyed equitably, including by groups that have historically borne the brunt of damage from policies that harm human health and the environment. President Biden noted this when announcing the Accelerator, which will direct 40 percent of investments to disadvantaged communities.

In the same spirit, CAEATFA programs place a premium on equity. The STE program prioritizes projects located in counties with higher-than-average unemployment, with the result that 49 percent of awardees have been sited in those counties. More than half (56 percent) of loans financed through GoGreen Home have been for properties in low-to-moderate-income census tracts.

"By ensuring that these programs benefit all Californians, including those who have long been excluded from prosperity, CAEATFA is proving that progress against climate change really can be done equitably," says Treasurer Ma. "That is very important to me personally and as California's Treasurer. After all, we are all in this together."
